Dr. Philip Zenner
1852-1956

In Memoriam

AT THE END of the American Civil War a 16-year-old boy entered Ohio University to begin a career which was to continue for nearly a century. His youth as a college freshman was a contrast to the returning Army veterans who made up the largest percentage of his class.

On June 25 of this year, Dr. Philip Zenner died at the age of 104, leaving behind him a fabulous record of achievement in the field of medicine, as well as an array of honors which continued to come to him until his death.

For several months before he died, Dr. Zenner, who had practiced medicine in his native Cincinnati for more than 60 years, was recognized as the oldest living college graduate in the United States.

He was also known as the oldest physician in Ohio, the nation's senior neurologist, the oldest professor emeritus of the College of Medicine at the University of Cincinnati, the oldest retired staff member of Jewish Hospital in that city, and often as the oldest bachelor in the world.

A man of unusual wit and charm, Dr. Zenner did not lose his faculty for quick thinking even after passing the age of 100.

He retired at the age of 96, which he described as "early enough to enjoy my old age", and until he was 103 years old, he went down town in Cincinnati every day by bus. There he would stop at his former office, lunch at the Cincinnati Club, and catch up on his reading at the library.

Once a newspaper reporter spotted him looking up records in the courthouse, and noticed that Dr. Zenner was not wearing glasses.

"Dr. Zenner, don't you use glasses?" the reporter asked. "Not when I'm reading", came the reply.

He still did not require glasses to read at the age of 104.

A vigorous man all his life, Dr. Zenner showed no signs of failing health until he was 102 years old. During Ohio University's sesquicentennial celebration he offered advice to OU's students in a recorded interview with President John C. Baker. The record was played during a Homecoming event that year.

In his will, Dr. Zenner bequeathed a sum of $10,000 to Ohio University, requesting that the money be used in the best interest of the library. The noted physician also left a number of technical books to the University library.

Although Dr. Zenner always enjoyed giving advice about the right kind of living, he avoided answering the stock question concerning the secret of long life.

Each year newspaper reporters asked him the question on May 17, his birthday, and each year he answered with a different quip.

One year he classified such information as a prescription, and told reporters that "I'd charge a million dollars for that one." Another time he conceded that being a bachelor helped, but would go no farther.

This year he was asked again to provide a recipe for young people seeking a Methuselah's life. His immediate answer was "I wouldn't be able to talk to them soon enough. I'd have to tell them what grandparents to select."

Dr. Zenner never boasted about his age, and refused to celebrate with birthday parties.

"I'm saving them all up until I get to be 120. Then I'll really celebrate", he would say.

The pioneer Cincinnati physician was remarkably free of wrinkles for his age and his memory was retentive right up until the time of his death. Deafness handicapped him in his last few years, but he continued to greet friends at his suburban apartment on Reading Road, and he enjoyed talking about community and world affairs.

The long career of Dr. Zenner contained many fascinating ventures in a variety of fields.

He was born in Cincinnati in 1852, the son of emigrants from Bavaria. A member of Phi Beta Kappa at Ohio University, he received the A. B. degree in 1870 and the A. M. degree in 1873.

In 1875 he graduated from the Miami Medical College, now a part of the University of Cincinnati. After four years' practice in that city he went abroad to study in Berlin, Vienna, Leipzig, Paris, and London. In the latter city he first came in contact with the study of neurology, which became his specialty.

Returning to Cincinnati in 1881, Dr. Zenner became the first physician there to practice neurology and psychiatry. He was the first Cincinnati doctor to hold clinics for nervous diseases, the first to suggest training of psychiatrists in mental institutions, and the first president and a founder of the Cincinnati Society of Neurology and Psychiatry.

In 1886 he helped organize the staff of Jewish Hospital, and continued as a member of the hospital staff even after his formal retirement.

Dr. Zenner was among the first to recognize the need for sex education for teen-agers, and in 1910 he wrote a book called "Education in Sexual Physiology and Hygiene". It was reprinted in 1926 and used in schools as late as 1935.

Another pioneer work, "Mind Cure and Other Essays", dealing with psychiatry, was published in 1912.

In 1929, Dr. Zenner established a loan fund for released prisoners of Ohio State Penitentiary. It was the first of its kind in the nation, set up to help former prisoners become re-established in private life.

Dr. Zenner also started a fund with the public school authority, which provided pin money for underprivileged children.

The Cincinnati doctor remained much concerned with the world and the young people of America. He often imparted his ideas in letters to senators and representatives and to newspapers.

He had seen many crises in his lifetime and was convinced that the solution to the problems of the world lies in learning tolerance. On his 104th birthday this May he expressed the belief that "Mankind will be all right as soon as everyone can learn to see the two sides to every question."

One of Dr. Zenner's newspaper friends, Columnist Alfred Segal, wrote, on the occasion of the physician's 102nd birthday, that "At 102 Dr. Zenner doesn't make much of his notable career, never in the least mentions the distinctions that came to him. He keeps himself in the humble place of a person who, by the grace of God, has managed to live that long; regrets his contemporaries who have had to leave so long before him."

It was not until his 104th year that Dr. Zenner began to fail rapidly in health. He diagnosed his ailment to friends as "an incurable illness," then added with a smile, "it's old age."

Death ended this extraordinary career on June 25, 1956. But the life of Dr. Philip Zenner leaves an imprint on history that spans more than a century of time.

Camera Shy

I have enjoyed reading the June Alumnus and thought the coverage of Commencement Weekend was very good. However, a number of OU alums including my brother-in-law, Fred Cibula, '53, have said, "And is that all who were back from your class," after having seen our picture.

As newly elected class secretary I am anxious to "clear the name" of the Class of '51 so I am sending some information about some of those who were back (more numerous than our picture would indicate). During the weekend Ruth Van Drick, Doris Hunker and I managed to talk with most of the people from our class who were registered, and here's what we learned.

There were quite a few at the Alumni Luncheon on Saturday. They included:

ED and DOROTHY COOK CORCORAN. They now live in Hartford, Conn. with two sons, James and Michael. Ed sells Univacs.

BOB and MITZI WOLFE BYALL. They live in Lakewood and have two children, Lynn and Robin.

WILLIAM MRAS and his wife, Louise. They live in Canton and have three boys, Charles, Mark and Stephen. Bill works for Ohio Power as an engineer.

DAN SCHWARTZ from Springdale, Pa. He's a geophysist with Gulf Oil Co. and has a daughter, Debbie.

RICHARD SULLIVAN, former class president from Ft. Thomas, Ky. Dick's in retailing in McAlpen's Department Store in Cincinnati.

RICHARD and MARILYN GLENN STELLING came from Harrisburg, Pa. where she tends to the house and Dick is a salesman for Johnson & Johnson.

JOHN WISE and his wife Margaret from Cleveland. Jack is with the YMCA.

MARY LOU HICKMAN BUTTERWORTH and her husband, Dr. Wayne, '50, were there from Marion. Have a baby, Gary Wayne.

FIRST LT. ROBERT B. SHAW is with the Air Force Procurement District in Indianapolis.

RUTH VAN DRICK and DORIS HUNKER. They live in Lakewood and teach at Madison School. The three of us drove down together. Ruth is chairman of the Lakewood Section of the Cleveland OU Women's Club and Doris is treasurer.

That evening at the Commencement Supper we met ELLEN JAMES REFFALT and MARY ORAN WITWER. Ellen wins the prize for coming the farthest—from Gurnsey, Wyoming. "Moe" lives in Akron.

On Sunday we talked with WENDELL MATHEWS of Cleveland. He has one more semester at the University of Michigan Law School. He came down with DON DUVAL, also of Cleveland, who works for Standard Oil.

WILLIAM DE PIOME, whom we saw at the dinner Sunday, had a special reason for being on hand. His wife Ann was graduated that day. He's an accountant in Youngstown and they have two children, Ann and Bill.

We also met DONN V. STOUTENBURG of Columbus.

It would appear that our class is just camera shy. But we certainly don't want people to be discouraged from coming to future reunions just because they think the crowd may be small.

Oldest Graduate

Greetings to the alumni of Ohio University from your oldest coed. How much I would like to have been with you at the reunion. I have so many pleasant memories of two years ago when I was able to attend and was introduced as the oldest coed at the sesquicentennial celebration.

We have a very thriving A.A.U.W. here in Paso Robles, and I am proud to represent Ohio University.

ELEANOR KIRKENDALL HUNTER, '86
Paso Robles, California

Mrs. Hunter, who will celebrate her 94th birthday in December, is now the oldest living graduate of Ohio University, following the death of Dr. Philip Zenner (page 3).—Ed.

AT THE 1956 Alumni Reunion Luncheon Dr. Stanley Dougan of Palm Springs, California, introduced a membership plan which found immediate endorsement among the more than 300 alumni present.

Suggested by President John C. Baker and organized by the Alumni Association's Board of Directors, the program is soundly designed to assure a financially stable, active alumni organization in the years to come.

The Honor Membership Plan, as it has been named by the Board, is without a doubt the highlight of a re-organization program which has been underway for two years. And it concerns every graduate of Ohio University.

Here is the plan as adopted by the Ohio University Alumni Association Board of Directors:

Honor Membership is conferred upon those persons in whose names $100 has been contributed for that purpose. This honor membership remains in perpetuity and is recorded as a life membership in the Alumni Association.

For the honor member this means a lifetime subscription to the Ohio Alumnus Magazine, annual reports from the Alumni Association covering all activities and expenditures, and yearly copies of the Ohio University president's annual report on all phases of University administration.

Contributions may be made in the name of the donor or in the name of the person of his choice, including those persons who are not alumni of Ohio University. Life Membership is given to the person in whose name the contribution or Honor Membership has been established.

Membership payments are deductible for federal income tax purposes by being drawn to the order of the Ohio University Fund, Inc. and channeled through the Alumni Office.

Each $100 thus sent to the Fund for an alumni Honor Membership is invested in the Irreducible Debt Fund of the State of Ohio to provide an annual income to the Alumni Association.

Donors also have the opportunity to establish Honor Membership by making four payments of not less than $25 each over a period of not more than four years. In such cases, the Honor Memberships do not become effective until the final payments.

However, any person who begins his Honor Membership on the deferred plan automatically receives the magazine without further charge for annual dues.

Reaction of the alumni attending the reunion luncheon was immediate and reassuring at the conclusion of Dr. Dougan's introduction of the Honor Membership Plan.

Twelve alumni came forward to present checks or pledges of $100 to Dr. Dougan, a member of the Board and one of the Association's leading organizers.

By the end of June, 25 Honor Memberships had been paid in full, five were in invoice for $100 as instructed by the donors, and four were established under the deferred payment plan.

With such an encouraging start, Board members hope to bring the total to 100 memberships by the 1957 June reunion. With continuous effort they feel the Honor Memberships can be increased to 1000 in the next ten years.

This would mean a definite income of $6000 yearly for alumni activities.

Advantages of the plan for the effective operation of an alumni program are many-fold. With a more substantial basis for anticipating future income, more concrete planning of club activities will be made possible.

Added economy measures will result from the decrease in magazine renewal promotion, providing more funds for promotion among alumni who do not belong to the Association.

Success of the Honor Membership Plan depends upon support from alumni clubs and individual alumni, not only in joining the plan, but in promoting it among other alumni and friends of Ohio University.

WITH THE 1956 football season opening in the midst of sports-world pandemonium over recruiting and aids to athletes, two questions are certain to be on the minds of many alumni.

What is Ohio University's athletic code? How does it compare with regulations set by the NCAA and the Mid-American Conference?

Although the answers to these questions involve many intricate details designed to cover different problems which can arise, the athletic code at Ohio University is based first and foremost upon the NCAA principle of amateurism:

"An amateur athlete is one who engages in athletics for the physical, mental, or social benefits he derives therefrom, and to whom athletics is an avocation. One who takes or has taken pay, or has accepted the promise of pay, in any form, for participation in athletics or has directly or indirectly used his athletic skill for pay in any form does not meet this definition of an amateur."

While this principle is handed down by the NCAA as a general code for all collegiate athletics, its interpretation is left to the discretion of each individual conference and school. Therefore, the NCAA code is more of a guide than a law.

For instance, the official interpretation on the subject of financial aid is outlined by the NCAA as follows:

"Financial aid awarded by an institution to a student-athlete should conform to the rules and regulations of the awarding institution and that institution's conference (if the institution holds such affiliation), but in the event such aid exceeds commonly accepted educational expenses for the undergraduate period of the recipient it shall be considered to be 'pay' for participation . . ."

Certain specific rules are set up by the NCAA, such as limiting the number of complimentary tickets awarded to team members, but in general the degree of amateurism can vary between conferences.

In any case, however, the athlete must meet the standards of "good scholastic standing" at his university.

At Ohio University a number of specific regulations covering all aspects of the athletic program form the backbone of a code slightly more rigid than the Mid-American rules.

This then is the Ohio University athletic policy as it now stands:

All athletic scholarships at Ohio University are financed through the Ohio University fund, from money donated specifically for that purpose. Donors of this money are alumni and friends of the University.

Like all other student aids, the athletic awards are administered through a faculty committee.

Each scholarship pays the general registration fee of $75 per semester, which is part of the $110 comprehensive fee for residents of Ohio. They are limited to 50 for freshmen and upperclassmen, of which approximately 40 go to football players.

It must be remembered, however, that several of the athletes compete in more than one sport.

To qualify for a $75 scholarship an incoming student must rank in the upper half of his high school graduation class, and to keep it during the following semesters, he must maintain a 2.00 scholastic average at the University—the minimum requirement for graduation.

This is more strict than the Mid-American Conference rule which does not require a scholarship recipient to be in the upper half of his high school graduation class, and permits scholarships to include instructional fees and books.

However, the Ohio University rule for scholarship has resulted in an extremely small loss of players through scholastic failure, according to Athletic Director Carroll C. Widdoes.

Part Time Jobs

A second form of aid is available in the form of job opportunities. These jobs are divided into two categories, commodity jobs and cash jobs.

Commodity jobs for athletes include 55 for room and board, and 35 for board only (of a campus total of 492 room and board jobs).

Here the Ohio University policy is almost identical to that of the Mid-American Conference.

The code states that "Job opportunities shall consist of bona fide opportunities to work to earn board or room, or both board and room at an institution. These shall be administered by the faculty committee in charge of student aid. The minimum number of hours students shall work for both board and room shall be seven hours weekly in season and 14 hours weekly out of season."

Ohio University's only variation from this rule is a stipulation that incoming freshmen who ranked in the lower one-fifth of their high school graduation class are not eligible for jobs until they prove themselves scholastically.

At the end of one year the athlete must have an average of 1.80 to continue working, and after three semesters he must maintain a 2.00 average.

Cash jobs at OU include a maximum of 12 janitorial positions paying 65 cents per hour.

In view of these regulations, an athlete coming to Ohio University has an opportunity to receive one of five combinations of financial aid. Beginning with the maximum aid available they are:

- (1) $75 Scholarship — Board and Room job
- (2) $75 Scholarship — Board job
- (3) Board and Room job
- (4) Board job
- (5) Cash job at 65 cents per hour

In all cases, the athletes must be enrolled in definite courses of study toward degrees.

Player Recruiting

A common misconception among fans is that a coach may go to a high school, talk to an athlete, and, if impressed, hand the young man a scholarship. This is far from true.

It is true that the coach may talk with prospective athletes, but the entire system of recruiting at Ohio University follows the Mid-American policy which states:

"Admission of students to member institutions is the function of departments of admission or appropriate admission authorities.

It is desirable that first contacts with prospective students be made by regular admission officers. However, in cases where contacts are established with prospective students without prior knowledge of admission officers, these contacts shall be reported immediately to appropriate admission officers so that they may have full knowledge of prospective candidates for admission to the institution. In processing the admission of students, all matters pertaining to high school records, transcripts, giving special examinations, and notifying students of admission, etc., shall be handled by the regular admission officers. With the approval of appropriate admission officers, members of departments of athletics of member institutions may make contact with prospective students on the same basis as other members of the faculty and staff with a view to encouraging enrollment at the particular institution concerned. In so doing, however, they shall not make any offers of financial aid (scholarships, grants-in-aid, work opportunities, etc.) or other assistance except to state that the prospective student may apply for financial aid through the proper faculty committee or committees."

This statement of the Mid-American code provides an accurate description of the recruiting policy of Ohio University. Coaches do visit high schools which have outstanding athletes, and the coaches talk with players whose progress they have watched, or who have been recommended by alumni.

But in recruiting, the coach can only tell of the opportunities for scholarships and jobs. From that point on the prospective student makes application through the admission office and the scholarship committee.

This is done in the same manner as that of any other high school graduate applying for a scholarship.

As at other Universities, there are a great many problems which arise from the recruiting program. One is a frequent misunderstanding by an alumnus who is interested in seeing a certain high school athlete attend his alma mater.

In several such instances it has been reported that the athlete ranked "easily in the upper half of his class", only to find through the official grade reports that he was in the lower fifth.

In such a case, the boy becomes ineligible for either a scholarship or a room or board job. When the policy is understood by all concerned, of course, the problem is erased.

Members of the Athletic Department staff are interested in having alumni help in carrying out a recruiting program in accordance with the policy set down by OU's administration.

Varsity Boards

To establish a better understanding among alumni and, at the same time, foster such alumni participation in recruiting, an Alumni Varsity Board is being organized in each location where an alumni chapter is functioning.

The purpose of these boards will be to perform local contacts with area high school students who, in the opinion of the coaches of Ohio University, have the necessary qualifications to participate in the athletic program. Alumni in these areas will be encouraged to channel their information and efforts through their Boards.

Chairmen of these local Varsity Boards become members of an Alumni Varsity Board Council which represents the Alumni Association's interest in the varsity sports program and promotes the athletic scholarship fund.

The current Varsity Board Council, under the chairmanship of Cleveland Attorney George M. Brown, '31, held its second annual meeting at the Ohio University campus on September 8.

Commerce Moves to a New Home

AS THE CAMPUS prepared for the beginning of its 153rd year a major change took place. For the first time since 1899 the College of Commerce moved to new quarters.

Named for the man who led the way in the development of commercial studies at Ohio University for 40 years, Copeland Hall is an ultra-modern classroom building containing the departments of accounting, advertising, business law, economics, finance, management, marketing, secretarial studies, and statistics, and the school of journalism. Its red brick colonial design is in keeping with that of other campus buildings.

Air-conditioned throughout its five floors of classrooms, conference rooms, laboratories, and offices, the new commerce building has a maximum capacity of 1300 students per hour, compared with approximately 1000 students enrolled in the college this semester.

However, the building is constructed in an "L" shape, permitting major additions as the need arises and funds become available.

Management and journalism, both of which utilize heavy demonstration and laboratory equipment, take up a major part of the basement floor. General classrooms and offices are found on the first, second, and third floors, and the top floor is devoted to secretarial studies. A statistics laboratory is also located on the third floor.

An unusual floor design actually adds extra office space. Because high ceilings are not needed for the offices, they are tiered in four levels corresponding to the regular second, third, and fourth classroom floors (notice difference in window levels in picture on next page). The extra floor of offices is known as the second floor mezzanine.

Faculty members, headed by Dean Clark E. Myers, each have a separate office in the $1,000,000 building. Meanwhile, the social sciences are able to expand facilities by taking over the vacated rooms in Ewing Hall.

A Half-Century of Development Preceded today's School of Commerce

THE QUESTION of providing "Commercial Education" at the college level, or more broadly the question of "how the present system of education should be altered so as to bring it in consonance with the needs of the business man," was receiving the attention of educators during the latter part of the 19th Century.

Ohio University, which since 1836 had provided preparatory and noncollegiate subjects designed to prepare for "clerkships and business pursuits," became a leader in providing a "university education" in preparation for commercial pursuits, as contrasted to a mere study of commercial subjects.

Leadership for this came from Charles Moffatt Copeland who lived from 1868 until 1944, and who symbolized "Commerce" at Ohio University from 1893 until 1934. His description of commercial education as "not all of an education, but a very useful and important part" set the stage for the type of training Ohio University has sought to provide.

It was in September 1893, a month before he was to reach the age of 25, that C. M. Copeland entered Ohio University. He entered on a tuition-free "county" scholarship. For five years he had taught rural schools in Harrison County, Ohio. Taking preparatory languages along with college courses, he graduated with the Bachelor of Pedagogy degree in 1896.

With most grades above 90, he earned a number of "Excellent" notations, and the record shows that in 1895 his essay was first in the Literary Society Contest. The unusual thing is that his preparatory and college courses were completed along with his duties as "Instructor in Commercial Branches."

He shared this branch of study with Mabel K. Brown, "Instructor in Stenography and Type-Writing." It was explained that "owing to a large demand for this kind of instruction arrangements have been made with efficient teachers in these branches to take charge of this work. For the present, however, their departments form no portion of the regular courses of study."

(Please turn page)

This then was the real beginning, at a relatively late date in the University's history, of what would culminate in a regular college in less than a half century. Appropriately the new building the college will occupy in 1956 is named for Copeland who for 41 years, until his retirement because of ill health in 1934, administered the affairs in turn of the Commercial Branches, the Commercial Department, the Commercial College, and the School of Commerce, advancing in the interval from instructor to professor and director.

A. H. Armbruster became the dean of the College of Commerce when it was established as an independent unit in 1936. Upon his death William F. Fenzel, senior professor, who had served for many years with Professor Copeland, acted as dean until the appointment of Clark E. Myers in 1954.

Few other departments and colleges at Ohio University have had as few changes in administrative personnel.

This was Ohio University when Copeland entered in 1893. There was a faculty of nineteen and an enrollment in the college and preparatory departments of 173.

The Bachelor of Arts, Bachelor of Philosophy, Bachelor of Science, Bachelor of Pedagogy, Master of Arts, Master of Philosophy, Master of Science, and Doctor of Philosophy degrees were available.

A total of 22 degrees were awarded in June 1894. The Preparatory and Collegiate Departments comprised the University, and the Center Building, the Wings, and the "new chapel building" (Fine Arts Hall) comprised the physical plant. The school year consisted of three terms. Tuition for a full load of regular courses was $7.00 per term with a contingent fee of $3.00. For the "Commercial Branches," which we noted formed "no portion of the regular courses of study," it was $5.00.

Following the turn of the century Summer School was to provide a demand for commercial courses from teachers in schools where these subjects were taught. The University's summer school had originated in 1892 when four faculty members cooperated to bring students to the campus to provide them with useful instruction and to provide for themselves additional income.

The 1894 session, the first "recognized" session, offered commercial subjects, but since college credit was not offered, there is no record of enrollment.

A great step forward for Commerce came in 1899 when the Commercial Department was established with Copeland as Principal. Students could now elect this work with the assurance that it would be credited to their college record.

Models in Arrangement

The Commercial Department was assigned "commodious rooms in the new building" (Ewing Hall). "The bank, and commission, wholesale, and railroad offices in the office department are models in arrangement, fixtures, and supplies."

Training came from filling in turn the subordinate and principal positions in these offices. Some of the work was described as being on "the inter-collegiate communication plan, and the transactions are with students of other colleges." Penmanship was an important subject designed to "help assure the success of the book keeper and stenographer."

In 1901 the Department became the Commercial College. Copeland retained the title of Principal. Diplomas were issued to those who completed the four year program, of which two years were preparatory and two collegiate.

The imposition of the requirement of preparatory work in English, U. S. History, and Civics was the result of experience "that special students with meagre equipment were poorly equipped for a successful business career even after they had made a good record in their commercial subjects." Three departments comprised the college: Accounting and Commercial Law, Stenography and Type-Writing, and Penmanship.

In 1902 there was a faculty of four. It was claimed that "no school in the country can show a larger percentage of its graduates at profitable employment." Emphasis was always on "a general culture as well as a knowledge of commercial branches."

The Four-Year Course

The year the four year course was established saw the opening of the State Normal College, a coordinate college with the College of Liberal Arts. The College of Music was in existence. In addition there were the Departments of Electrical Engineering and Drawing and Painting, and the State Preparatory School.

Affiliated with the University were the Cincinnati College of Dental Surgery, and of Pharmacy. University enrollment in the fall of 1902 was 259.

The first graduate of the "four-year commercial course" was Roy T. McClure of Bloomingsburg, Ohio. A graduate of the high school there, he matriculated in September 1902, and received his certificate in 1904.

Following graduation McClure engaged in banking.

In 1909 the School of Commerce was established, with Copeland the Principal. Admission requirements to its collegiate course of two years were the same as for the regular freshman class of the University. Special courses in Accounting, Typewriting, and Stenography were provided, as well as a two year Teachers' Course in Stenography. University enrollment was 651.

In 1913 Copeland's title was changed from Principal to Director of the School of Commerce. University enrollment was 809. By 1916 the School had a faculty of five. The A. B. in Commerce degree was now available. This statement set forth the position of the School. "The problems that confront the business man and the business problems that confront the nation are no less difficult or important than the problems that engage the doctor, teacher, preacher, lawyer or other non-commercial worker.

"If the last named need both general culture and special training the business man cannot expect to succeed with less." Emphasis again was on the aim "primarily to educate and secondarily to give them a training that will prepare them to render efficient service . . . or to understand and appreciate the service of those thus employed."

The post-war period saw further reorganization of the University. In 1922 when University organization included only two colleges—Liberal Arts and Education—the School of Commerce had six faculty members plus three special lecturers. University enrollment was 1515.

In June 1920 the first two A.B. in Commerce degrees had been conferred upon Dean Burns Copeland and Frank Joseph Hodan. Two years later the Commerce faculty numbered eight, and "conductors of extra courses," business and professional men, numbered four.

Their subjects that year were Negotiable Contracts, Accounting for Coal Production and Distribution, Practical Banking, Commercial Law, and C.P.A. Practice and Problems.

In June 1925, 25 A.B. in Commerce degrees were awarded.

Students were not permitted to enroll for a two year commercial course after September 1, 1926. The Bachelor of Secretarial Science degree was instituted, and conferred for the first time in June 1928 upon Carroll Corrine Baker and Martha Calkins.

The period prior to 1936, the year the College of Commerce was established, saw the establishment of Alpha Omicron Chapter of Delta Sigma Pi, professional Commerce fraternity, Accounting, Advertising, Finance, Marketing, Secretarial Course, Law, Geography of Commerce and Industry, Business English, Management, and Office Work were the divisions of instruction.

College Established

With the establishment of the College the Bachelor of Science in Commerce and Bachelor of Science in Secretarial Studies degrees became effective. Thirty-seven B.S.C. degrees and seven

B.S.S.S. degrees were awarded for the first time on June 7, 1937.

Economics was made a department of the College so that today, in addition to the School of Journalism and the Department of Agriculture, which are administrative units within the College, these are its departments: Accounting, Advertising, Business Law, Economics, Finance, Management, Marketing, Secretarial Studies, and Statistics.

In addition to its regular teaching program, Commerce, exclusive of Journalism and Agriculture, sponsors during the summer the Ohio School of Banking, and the Executive Development Program, and cooperates in conducting the Ohio Workshop on Economic Education.

In addition to providing undergraduate degree programs, it provides work for the master's degree. The Master of Business Administration program is a new feature.

Through June, 1956, 3139 B.S.C. and A.B. in Commerce degrees and 199 B.S.S. and B.S.S.S. degrees have been conferred, a sixth of the 18,499 baccalaureate degrees conferred by the University during that period.

Since 1950 it has been fully accredited by the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business. At the time it was accredited it was one of seventy colleges in the country to be so recognized. In 1951 Beta Gamma Sigma, business honorary, was established.

This is a remarkable record for slightly more than a half century of development in an area of instruction in which Copeland was a pioneer.

In Copeland Hall Commerce will be able better to perpetuate its tradition of training for positions of responsibility in Business and for other positions where administrative ability is required.

A UNIQUE CLASSROOM, designed by Director L. J. Hartin of the School of Journalism and his staff, offers students the opportunity to sit at desks designed like those in newspaper offices, and learn to take stories over the phone. Instructor above is Russell N. Baird.

Record Enrollment

Ohio University's enrollment reached a new high with the opening of the 1956-57 school year. Unofficial figures show a total enrollment of 6850, which includes 4395 men and 2455 women.

Last year's enrollment reached 6109.

As a temporary housing measure, girls will live on East Green for the first time this fall. Although the entire dormitory unit there is to be all-male housing eventually, an immediate need for women's housing has brought the assignment of some 200 coeds to Biddle Hall.

Construction of the largest of the East Green dormitories is well under-way, as the University continues to build housing for steadily increasing numbers of students.

The dormitory, 11th of the 12 proposed units on East Green, is 400 feet long and will provide quarters for at least 312 men. It also will contain a large cafeteria, a branch library, and garage space for about 120 automobiles. Cost of the structure is estimated at $1,975,000, including complete furnishings.

Meanwhile work continues on another East Green dormitory which has been under construction since last semester.

Other major expansion now underway includes the building of an addition to the Engineering Building and an indoor practice field. Ground breaking for both was started in September.

The engineering addition will cost about $400,000 as compared to the $250,000 original unit on President Street.

Located on the site of the present women's athletic fields, the Indoor Practice Building will be equipped with a dirt floor for half the year and an olympic-size ice skating rink the other half. Cost of the building is expected to be approximately $350,000.

Facilities of the Service Department have been moved from Union Street to new quarters in the former Athens Ice and Storage Buildings on Factory Street, and the former Service Building has been renovated to provide industrial arts classroom and laboratory space.

President's Leg Broken

Ohio University President John C. Baker has been carrying on "business as usual" from a wheelchair since breaking a leg in a fall from his riding horse September 8.

Surgery was performed on the leg in mid-September when it failed to knit as doctors had hoped, but President Baker quickly returned to his work and his leg is now healing well.

Hall will make room for expanded physics facilities.

In the University Center's ground floor level the Frontier Room snack bar has been pine paneled. The serving area has been enlarged and booths placed around the walls of the adjoining cafeteria dining area to provide additional service to students.

Summer Graduation

Dr. Stewart H. Smith, president of Marshall College, delivered the annual summer commencement address before 151 graduating seniors, the faculty, and friends, August 11.

Recipients of degrees included 86 men and 65 women, with 116 receiving bachelor's degrees and 35 master's degrees. Divided according to colleges, they were the College of Education, 65; Commerce, 20; Arts and Sciences, 16; Fine Arts, 9; and Applied Science, 6. In the Graduate College, 16 were awarded master's degrees in education, 11 in arts, 4 in fine arts, 3 in science, and 1 in business administration.

Dean Earl C. Seigfred of the College of Fine Arts presided over the exercises in the absence of President John C. Baker. The Rev. Charles Magruder, minister of the First Baptist Church in Athens, gave the invocation and benediction.

Variety of Workshops

Twenty-four workshops, conferences, camps, and clinics brought approximately 3000 persons to the campus this summer for a variety of special training sessions.

Largest of the summer events was the School of Journalism's 11th annual workshop on high school publications, which attracted nearly 1000 students and teachers from 238 schools.

The longest workshop was that in summer theatre, which featured the sixth season of the Ohio Valley Summer Theatre. The theatre workshop is sponsored jointly by the University and the community, and includes the presentation of six popular plays.

Other programs were a science camp (see page 13), a conference in elementary education, Ohio workshop on economic education, Ohio school of banking, conference on school administration, conference of professional engineers, executive development program, Methodist Church conference, Ohio conservation laboratory, Ohio Bookmen's Club exhibit, workshops in home economics education, a conference on world affairs, the opera workshop, special painting classes, elementary music teachers workshop, Climes conference, CIO conference, workshop for teacher certification in driver education, driver education workshop for in-service teachers, Ohio garden clubs, music clinic, and a workshop in debate.

THIRTY business and industrial leaders from nine states participated in a four-week Ohio University Executive Development course in July and August. Most sessions were informal discussions such as this one in the University Center.

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS GET PRACTICAL INSTRUCTION IN PROGRAM DESIGNED TO HELP SOLVE A CRITICAL NATIONAL PROBLEM.

IN RECENT years a serious shortage has threatened the rapid technological expansion of the United States. With the country locked in a duel for technical leadership, it faces a critical lack, not of materials, but of trained scientific personnel.

The best estimates show that our colleges and scientific schools are annually turning out about 23,000 scientists and engineers, but twice that number are needed each year to maintain our position of world leadership.

What can be done about it? One answer is an increase in high school scientific study.

Perhaps even more important are immediate programs to encourage and develop an interest in science among the qualified high school students available now.

To initiate such a program in the State of Ohio, a new workshop in science was sponsored by Ohio University this summer, with highly encouraging results. Known as the OU High School Science Camp, it drew 88 outstanding students to the campus for two weeks of carefully-planned demonstrations, laboratory experiments, field trips, discussions, and science films.

Although the students were not required to do intensive "homework," they were pleasantly exposed to the fields of botany, chemistry, geography, geology, mathematics, physics, zoology, and photography.

Directed by Dr. William G. Gambill, associate professor of botany, the Science Camp had on its staff 13 University faculty members and a graduate assistant.

Four major industrial companies cooperated in the venture by donating 25 scholarships totaling $1200 for the camp. Recipients were chosen according to high school scholarship and need.

Dr. Gambill

Success of the Science Camp, which was one of three or four in the United States and the only one in Ohio, provided assurance that it will become an annual affair at Ohio University. It also helped set a pattern for one type of program which can go a long way in the encouragement of scientific study.

REGISTRATION of 88 carefully selected students from all parts of Ohio took place at the Agriculture Building, center of activities for the Science Camp. Students stayed in University dormitories and ate in student dining rooms during the two weeks.

BOTANY offered the young students a brief investigation of the growth, development, reproduction, classification, and utilization of plants. Here students look at slides of plant materials under supervision of Dr. Stephen Boyce.

CHEMISTRY experiments gave science campers an idea of the facilities and instruction offered at college level. Each student was able to carry out some practical project such as the synthesis of aspirin.

PHYSICS demonstrations ranged through several fields, enabled students to see such things as a half-million volt electrostatic generator in action, and operate cloud chamber shown here.

ZOOLOGY demonstrations were designed to help students understand methods and scope of animal science. Each person was permitted to conduct experiments on the physiology of respiration and circulation. Boy in picture on left prepares a frog for demonstration on the right, in which the group watches a chymography record of the frog's heart beat being made.

GEOLOGY AND GEOGRAPHY highlights were field trips to an Athens County gravel pit which furnished opportunities to inspect layers of coal deposits (above), search for fossils (below), and get explanations of geological materials from Dr. Myron T. Sturgeon (right).

MATHEMATICS discussions were led by Dr. Samuel J. Jasper (left), who gave underlying ideas basic to advanced math and pointed out opportunities existing in the various branches of mathematics.

RECREATION also had a part in the Science Camp program, in the form of organized tennis, swimming, dancing, and softball each evening. Most popular recreation event was an outing to Lake Hope, where this photo was taken.

The answer is BRANCHES

WITH THE tidal wave of university enrollment moving closer and closer to the nation's campuses, Ohio University has taken a giant stride in its preparation for the rapid increases that are certain to continue for many years.

In spite of a building campaign which continues at a rapid pace, the campus itself will not be able to absorb the full impact of such an increase, so University officials are looking confidently to the Branch program, which has already proved its value.

The first step in meeting the problem through the branches came this summer with the appointment of Prof. Albert C. Gubitz as dean of the branches.

Immediately following the appointment, two new branch colleges were set up in Ironton and Lancaster. Arrangements were completed during the summer months and the two new OU affiliates opened their doors to students this semester.

This expansion brings the total number of Ohio University branch colleges to five. The other three, Portsmouth, Chillicothe, and Zanesville were organized by Dean Gubitz in 1946 as a temporary means of meeting the increased veteran enrollment.

However, the branches proved so successful that they were continued after the veterans bulge came to an end, and since 1951 they have been on a self sustaining basis. Dean Gubitz has served as director of the branches since their organization.

Although exact tabulations for branch enrollment have not been completed, the unofficial figure for the current semester is 1100 giving an idea of the important part the five "off-campus colleges" can play in Ohio University's future.

Their importance in the past is none the less impressive. Covering two years of college training, the branch curriculum offers courses identical to those at the University. At the end of the two years a student can terminate his education or transfer to a four-year college to complete requirements for a bachelor's degree.

Faculty are recruited from four sources, the regular Ohio University faculty, qualified high school teachers, industry, and other universities.

Nearly 700 branch students have transferred to the main campus to continue their educations, and their records have been highly impressive. Last year four of the ten students named to Phi Beta Kappa honor society had started their college training at OU branches.

But the value of the branch program has not been solely in its alleviation of enrollment problems. The branches have also provided many students the opportunity for higher education when they were economically unable to leave home. Branch classes are offered in the high schools during the late afternoon and evening hours, making it possible for students to hold full-time jobs.

A significant contribution is also being made in providing trained teachers for Ohio schools. The Cadet Teaching Program, introduced in the branches in 1953, has become a major part of the curricula. This two-year program qualifies students for teaching, giving them a four-year provisional teaching certificate. If they have completed 24 additional hours toward a degree in that period of time, they can obtain another certificate.

Ten freshman and ten sophomore scholarships are awarded each semester to students in the Cadet Teaching Program at each of the branches.

In addition, several community scholarships have been inaugurated at the branch cities. Last year a total of 110 scholarships were held by students at the three branches.

Working under Dean Gubitz are local administrative directors at each of the branches. These five administrators are Ralph Elliott, Portsmouth; David W. Wilson, Chillicothe; Ellis Miracle, Zanesville; Howard Kirk, Lancaster; and James J. Main, Jr., Ironton.

The branch program of Ohio University may not be the complete solution to a problem which perplexes educators in all parts of the country. But it is proving its value to the extent that it has already gained a great deal of attention in the field of higher education.

DIRECTORS of the two newest Ohio University branches are Howard E. Kirk, left, Lancaster, and James J. Mains, Jr., Ironton.

Faculty Promotions

Twenty-six members of the Ohio University faculty received promotions with the beginning of the new semester.

Named to a full professorship was Dr. Carl G. Gustavson, a member of the History Department since 1945, and author of a book, "Preface to History", published last year.

Dr. Gustavson, who did research at the Library of Congress this summer under an American Philosophical Society grant, was recently honored by the Ohio Academy of History for his book, which was chosen "best of the year by an Ohio historian."

Sixteen faculty members were promoted from assistant to associate professors. They are Dr. William T. Fishback, Dr. Robert K. Butner, Dr. Samuel J. Jasper, Warren H. Reininga, Dr. Lee C. Sohtow, A. A. Nellis, Irvin P. Badger, Dr. Donald E. Perry, Dr. Margaret Felsing, Allyn Bane, Dr. Thomas S. Smith, Dr. Idus L. Murphree, Dr. Harry B. Crewson, Russell N. Baird, Dr. James V. Lawrence, and Clifford Heffeling.

Promoted from instructors to assistant professors were Cosmo Catalano, Thomas S. Ludlum, William H. Olpp, Edward G. Russ, Sherwood E. Hall, Florence Ullman, David L. Hostetler, Dr. Morton Benson, and Kathryn Ann Manuel.

Two-Year Leave

Dr. Frederick H. McKelvey, director of the Summer Session and University Extension, began a two-year leave of absence on September 15 to accept an appointment with the Ministry of Education in Guatemala.

Appointed to the position by the International Cooperation Administration of the U. S. State Department, Dr. McKelvey will serve as technical director of urban education, with the Ministry of Education in that country.

He will assist Guatemalan Ministry officials and administrative personnel in a reorganization of the urban educational program. Four American technicians are also assigned to the project.

Mrs. McKelvey and children Susan and Tom expect to join Dr. McKelvey in Guatemala City this month.

Veterans Director Named

Vincent Jukes, director of radio, television, and audio-visual services, has taken on the added responsibility of coordinator of veterans affairs at the University. He succeeds Eugene Jennings, who has been granted a year's leave of absence to further his music studies in England.

Mr. Jukes, a 1930 graduate of Ohio University, will continue to head the radio, television, and audio-visual services program which was established on the campus last year.

New Photographer

Edward E. Rhine, who has served as University Photographer during the past year, has been named assistant to the Dean of the Branches. In his new position, Mr. Rhine will assist in the public relations program, which includes publication of brochures and organization of high school visitations, in addition to his work with the expanding branch program (see page 18).

Richard R. Lippincott succeeds Mr. Rhine as University photographer. In that capacity he also serves as photographer for the Alumnus magazine.

Faculty Briefs

DR. A. T. VOLWILER, professor of history, taught a senior-graduate lecture course and directed a seminar at San Francisco State College during the summer. He and Mrs. Volwiler toured the Southwest on their way to California.

DR. ERNEST M. COLLINS, chairman of the Department of Government, is author of a report, "Citizenship Education in Ohio Colleges", which appeared in a recent issue of the Journal of Higher Education.

DR. JOHN GADY, professor of history, has returned to the University after spending a year in Rangoon, Burma, where he studied under a Fulbright research grant. Mrs. Gady also had a Fulbright scholarship, hers a teaching grant.

LT. COL. GEORGE W. DICKERSON, MAJ. THEODORE ROTHWELL, M-SGT. ADOLF J. KRATCHOVL, and SGT. WILLIAM WOLFE, all members of the ROTC or AFROTC staffs at OU, left the campus this summer for reassignment.

DR. KARL AHRENBT, director of the School of Music, served as a composer in residence at the MacDowell Colony, Peterborough, N. H. this summer. He was selected by a committee of nationally prominent musicians for admission to the colony, an honor given only to those of unusual promise.

LEWIS F. HICKS, assistant professor of mechanical engineering, spent the summer working at the Argonne National Laboratory's Nuclear Energy Institute.

ROBERT M. FREIMARK, instructor in drawing, was director and instructor in painting at the Crystal Lake Art Center, Frankfort, Mich., during the summer. In addition to his teaching, he organized a series of lectures, exhibitions, movies, and demonstrations by guest artists.

DR. WALTER NAUMANN, visiting lecturer in German, gave a series of lectures during the summer quarter at the University of Marburg, in Germany. He also conducted a seminar there.

DR. CHARLES R. MAYES, assistant professor of history, spent six weeks of the summer visiting industries and attending seminars under provisions of an "Economics-In-Action" fellowship from Case Institute of Technology.

NEW OHIO UNIVERSITY DIRECTOR OF ADMISSIONS Clark E. Williams, '21, right, will be welcoming to the campus many children of friends he has come to know while serving as alumni secretary for 32 years. Mr. Williams assumed his new office in July, following the retirement of former director Frank B. Dilley, left.

ATLANTA ALUMNI met on September 20 at an organizational dinner meeting, and some went on to Tallahassee for the football game. At the dinner table in Atlanta, left to right, are Bill Faught, '52; Mrs. Faught (Donna Laper, '52); Jack Gleason, '41; Alumni Secretary Marty Hecht, '46; Mrs. Clarence Bolen; Clarence Bolen, '26; Mrs. Jahn K. Mumford (Elizabeth Breese, '30); and Bob Smith, manager of OU's football team.

Bobcat

By Rowland Congdon

SPORTS PUBLICITY DIRECTOR

OHIO UNIVERSITY'S football team witnessed one of the nation's most explosive offenses in their 1956 season opener against Florida State at Tallahassee, Fla.

The Seminoles literally ran and passed the Bobcats ragged with their deceptive maneuvers from the "I" formation, rolling to a 47-7 win.

Veteran Florida State observers agreed that they had never seen the famed "I" work with such precision, at least for this early in the season. Crisp blocking and magician-like deception aided in the display.

Coach Carroll Widdoes remarked after the game that FSU's quarterback, Lee Corso, "kept us in the soup all the way with his fine running and deception. The whole FSU team looked good, and they should do all right the rest of the way."

About the Bobcats, Widdoes said, "We definitely were not sharp. Our offense sputtered, and only once were we able to get a sustained drive going." This was a 59-yard march which ended in OU's only touchdown of the night, a minute before the first half ended.

Before OU could run a play from scrimmage they were down, 13-0. FSU took the opening kickoff to score in 10 plays, then after an OU fumble on the ensuing kickoff, scored again. OU trailed at the half, 20-7.

Leading ground-gainer for the Bobcats was Warren junior halfback, Jim Hilles, with 40 yards in 12 carries. New Philadelphia junior halfback, Norman Leggett, was a close second, with 32 yards in 10 tries. Don McBride completed only two of 11 passes, far under his 55 percent completion mark of 1955.

FLORIDA ALUMNI of Ohio University turned out in large numbers for the Ohio University football opener with Florida State University and accompanying alumni affairs. This group attended a dinner meeting preceding the night game. Informal cocktail parties were also held.

Roundup

The Bobcats prepped for the opener for three weeks, two of which were conducted under twice daily conditions.

One major casualty and a few minor ones rose up to cast their mark on the practice sessions and future games.

Don Schulick, an end from Youngstown, suffered a dislocated shoulder which kept him inactive most of the pre-season period. It was also to keep him out of early games. A junior, Schulick lettered as a tackle last season.

One of the biggest blows came the day before the team returned to Athens for the fall workouts. On August 30, Halfback Vernon Smith underwent an emergency appendectomy. Recuperation from that required that he would miss probably the first two or three games. He returned to campus in time for the start of school, but missed all the early season contact work. He was expected back in uniform a week or two after the first game.

Smith, who lettered as a fullback his first two seasons, was looking forward eagerly to this, his senior year. For he had been switched to halfback last spring and was slated for a first string berth when the bad luck struck.

His place was taken by Dave Kuenzli, Upper Sandusky junior, who missed the final four games of 1955 with a shoulder injury. He seems to be fully recovered from that, however, and is expected to be a capable replacement for Smith.

His running mate at halfback is another junior, Jim Hilles, of Warren. Hilles suffered a slight separation in his shoulder during pre-season drills. Consequently he missed a few days of rough work. But a special shoulder pad adjustment was provided and he was expected to be at near full strength for Toledo.

Another casualty to the front-line members occurred when Doug Fairbanks, senior center, and the bulwark of the line at 210-pounds, suffered a cartilage tear in one knee, forcing him to miss the week's practice before Florida State.

Nevertheless, this was slated to be the opening lineup for Coach Carroll Widdoes' eighth season at Ohio U.:

This unit consists of four lettermen, three seniors, six juniors and two sophomores.

Major position problem of the pre-season period was end, Jack Vair, last year's most valuable player, did not return to practice because of ineligibility after having to drop out of school the second semester last year. This and graduation of others necessitated moving several players from other positions.

Tackle was better fortified than in several years and guard and center posts were adequately filled, it was felt. Others who would have helped had they been able to return to their backfield posts were Ron Macuga and Roger Thomas. Macuga is recuperating from a knee operation of last spring (he was second-string quarterback last year) while Thomas did not return to school because of family duties. He is married and has a child.

But spirit was high and squad members were silently but confidently going about their work to debunk some of the pre-season predictions that it would be a long year on the banks of the Hocking River.

CAPTAIN DICK PERKINS

Among the Alumni

1903

FLORENCE GABRIEL retired in July after 27 years of service with the Ohio Department of Highways. A resident of Columbus for the past 45 years, she joined the department in 1929, and has since worked as secretary to 10 different state purchasing agents.

1908

BARNETT W. TAYLOR, one of Cleveland's best known and best liked educators, retired June 30 from the principal's job at East Technical High School. He was in the Cleveland school system since 1915, and principal at East Tech since 1936. Mr. Taylor now spends his time at a 240-acre farm he has owned for the past 15 years in Ashtabula County.

1911

EDWARD G. PORTZ has an insurance agency in Portland, Ore.

1912

HARRY RIDENOUR, retired Baldwin-Wallace professor and a recognized authority on Ohio folk lore, is author of an article on folk music which appeared recently in the national music fraternity magazine, Sinfonian. Mr. Ridenour has given more than 40 programs on Ohio ballads and folk-songs before various Ohio groups during the past year.

1914

ANNE PICKERING has retired from teaching after 38 years at Athens High School. Adviser of the school paper for 38 of its 40 years, Miss Pickering also served as sponsor of the national honor society, yearbook adviser, and dramatics sponsor. She taught journalism and English literature.

1915

GRACE BATEMAN RUCKER (Mrs. Robert E.), of Columbus, was elected and installed in June as international president of LaSertoma, at Louisville. The LaSertoma is the auxiliary to the Sertoma Club which is the second oldest civic service club in North America. Mr. Rucker, a 1914 OU graduate, has been a member of the organization for 25 years.

STANLEY M. HASTINGS, who retired from the teaching profession in 1954, is now serving as business manager for the Eggleston Memorial Hospital for Children in Atlanta, Ga.

1917

MARY NICHOLS CRONENWETT, a teacher in the Galion public schools for 38 years, retired in June. All except one of the years was spent teaching the first grade.

1918

JOHN A. LOGAN, president of the National Association of Food Chains, Washington, D. C., was awarded an honorary degree of Doctor of Laws in June by the New Mexico College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts in State College, N. M.

DR. W. P. FISHILL, recently retired as head of the metallurgy department at Vanderbilt University, and Mrs. Fishel, have established their permanent residence in Pleasant City, W. Va. Both are natives of that city.

1919

H. E. FREDERICK of Marysville, vice-president of the Shea Chemical Corporation, has been named head of the company's new division consolidating all agricultural sales. The corporation is one of the nation's largest suppliers of phosphates for feed.

1921

G. HAROLD MARTIN, Fort Lauderdale attorney, recently was awarded a special certificate of appreciation and a letter of citation from the National Recreation Association. The letter stated, in part, that Mr. Martin is the "father of recreation in Fort Lauderdale. For 30 years, on behalf of your city, you have fought for recreation space, facility, program and qualified personnel." Mrs. Martin is the former MARGERY YOUNG.

1923

DR. LESTER D. CROW, associate professor of education at Brooklyn College, and his wife, Alice, are co-authors of a new booklet, "Understanding Our Behavior", published by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc., New York. Dr. Crow and his wife, who is also on the Brooklyn College faculty, have both published numerous articles and books.

CLARA BLUME MARTIN (Mrs. J. K.) is teaching elementary subjects at Rockbridge this year.

C. C. COWDEN has been promoted from assistant superintendent to superintendent of the car department of the Nickel Plate Railroad, with headquarters at Cleveland. Mr. and Mrs. Cowden live in Lakewood.

Club Awards

THE SOUTHERN California and Greater New York City alumni clubs have been recognized as the outstanding chapters of the Ohio University Alumni Association during the 1955-56 year.

Selection of the co-winners was announced at the annual meeting of the Association's Board of Directors, and letters of commendation have been sent to each organization.

Other chapters cited for actively participating in Association programs were the Akron, Dayton, Denver, Detroit, Franklin County, Lancaster-Fairfield, Lima, Northern California, Schenectady, St. Louis, and Tampa Alumni Clubs; and the Akron, Cleveland, Mansfield, and Youngstown Women's Clubs.

GORDON K. BUSH, publisher of the Athens Messenger, was one of a group of Ohio leaders invited by Gov. Frank Lausche to attend the Ohio Conference on Peacetime Uses of Nuclear Energy and Radiation Safety in August.

ANDREW T. SMITHBERGER, assistant head of the Department of English at the University of Notre Dame, served for two months this summer as director and principal caller of a series of community square dances in South Bend parks and school-grounds. Directing these square dances for both children and adults is a hobby for Professor Smithberger. He also taught during the summer session at Notre Dame.

—Deaths—

JUDGE LEWIS H. MILLER, '13, a judge of the 5th Judicial Circuit of Ohio for 28 years, died July 14 of a heart attack at his home in Ripley, W. Va. Judge Miller, who received his Lld. degree from the University of West Virginia, was the recipient of a Certificate of Merit from the OU Alumni Association in June. He also has received an honorary Lld. degree from Morris Harvey College in Charleston. A former mayor of Ripley and state senator in the West Virginia Legislature, Judge Miller was elected to his fourth straight eight-year term on the Circuit Court bench in 1952. He was a member of many civic and professional organizations, and the author of a book, "Equity Procedure and Practice for West Virginia and Virginia." Surviving are his wife, three daughters, two brothers, and six sisters.

THOMAS E. ASHTON, JR., '44, was among the passengers killed in a TWA Constellation that crashed in the Grand Canyon June 30. Regarded as one of the outstanding young men with Trans World Airlines, he had just been promoted to supervisor of industrial relations for the airline's western region. At the time of his death he was enroute to Kansas City to see his wife, the former Barbara Fisher, '43, and their two children. Other survivors are his parents; a sister, Mrs. Jack B. Smith who is the former Adeline M. Ashton, '45; and a brother.

NELSON H. OLIVER, '52, a meat specialist for the Foodtown Stores of Cleveland, died suddenly on June 27 while visiting in Geneva, Ohio. His death, which occurred without previous illness, was caused by a coronary thrombosis. Mr. Nelson and his wife, the former Myra Trudering, who was for a time on the faculty of Ohio University, had recently built a new home in Cleveland. Also surviving is their three-year-old daughter, Trudy Rosemary.

MRS. MYRTLE E. KASLER, who received her B.S. degree in education in 1954 after teaching for many years in Athens and Vinton county schools, died July 22 after a month's illness. An engraved silver tray is presented to the late Harry B. McBee, right, by Royal McBee President Philip M. Zenner. Mr. McBee graduated from Ohio University in 1912 and Mr. Zenner served as line coach for the University's football teams from 1920 to 1922.

HARRY B. MCBEE, '12, son of the co-founder of The McBee Company, died on August 28, following a week's hospitalization with pneumonia. Death came less than two months after his retirement.

Mr. McBee ended nearly a half century of association with The McBee Company, a division of Royal McBee Corp., when he retired on July 1. At the time of his retirement, he was a vice president and manager of McBee's binder plant in St. Louis, Mo., and a director of Royal McBee Corp.

Mr. McBee was honored June 13 at a testimonial dinner in Athens, the home office of The McBee Company. His St. Louis associates feted him at an open house at the plant there on June 27. The Athens dinner also brought to a close a three-day observance of the company's 50th anniversary.

Mr. McBee first became associated with the company which his father helped found in Athens when he was a senior in high school. A desire to enter law practice sent him to Ohio University, where he graduated in 1912, and then on to Western Reserve's School of Law where he received his degree in 1915.

He practiced law until 1919 when he returned to the company which bears his name as manager of the St. Louis binder operation. Mr. McBee is survived by his wife, Olive, and one daughter, Mrs. Jane Avery.
